Venice, February 26, N. S.

THE 21st of this Month being appointed for the Publick Entry of the Earl of Holderneſs, Ambaſſador Extraordinary from his Majeſty the King of Great Britain, his Excellency went about Noon to the Iſland of S. Spirito, where he was received by the Superior and Fathers of the Convent, and conducted to an Apartment furniſhed by the State for his Reception. Several Engliſh Gentlemen, and Foreigners of Diſtinction, being Subjects of the Allies of the Crown of England, with the Conſul and Britiſh Merchants reſiding in Venice, came to the Iſland to compliment and attend the Ambaſſador. Some Time after, Signor Tron, Cavalier of the Stola d'Oro, with ſixty Senators, landed there. The Cavalier ſent a Secretary of the Republick to acquaint the Ambaſſador with his Arrival. His Excellency returned this Compliment by his Secretary, and then came down the Stairs, and met the Cavalier in the Middle of the Cloyſter: After having complimented each other, the Cavalier placed himſelf on the Ambaſſador's Left Hand, and conducted him to the Gondola, in which he came to wait upon him, and gave his Excellency the Hand there. The Senators did the ſame to the Engliſh Gentlemen, &c. The Cavalier's Boat preceded, and was followed by the Ambaſſador's three State Gondolas magnificently gilt and adorned. Being come to the Ambaſſador's Palace, the Cavalier and Senators, giving the Hand to the Ambaſſador and his Suite, waited upon him into the Audience Room, where, after being complimented and entertained with Refreſhments, they took their Leave, and were reconducted to their Boats by his Excellency and the Engliſh Gentlemen, &c. giving the Hand to the Cavalier and the Senators.

On the 22d the Cavalier came, attended by the ſixty Senators, and having notified his Arrival as before, the Ambaſſador met him upon the Middle of the Stairs, and giving him the Hand, conducted him to the Audience Room. After Civilities, they came down to the Boats, the Cavalier giving the Hand to the Ambaſſador. Upon entring the College, the Doge and Members of it aroſe from their Seats, and after the uſual Formalities, his Excellency ſat down covered on the Doge's Right Hand, and preſented his Credential Letters. The Ambaſſador made a Speech proper for the Occaſion in the Engliſh Language, and a Tranſlation of it into Italian being read by a Secretary, the Doge anſwered it. After this the Cavalier and Senators waited upon the Ambaſſador back to his Palace, and after the ſame Ceremonies and Civilities as the Day before, took their Leave.

His Excellency excuſed himſelf from being treated for three Days at the publick Charge, which was offered to him. The Doge and Senate ſent his Excellency, during that Time, Preſents of Wine and Proviſions.

Upon the 26th the Ambaſſador, attended by only the Engliſh Gentlemen, went to the College to receive the Anſwer of the Senate. The Ambaſſador was in the firſt State Gondola, attended by the Secretary of the Embaſſy and the Conſul. He went alone into the College, and came out attended by a Secretary of the Republick, who dictated to his Excellency's Secretary the Anſwer of the Senate. After this, the Ambaſſador and his Suite walked through the Merceria to the Rialto, where his Gondolas waited for him, and then returned to his Palace.

The whole Ceremony was conducted with the greateſt Order and Magnificence. Nothing was wanting on the Part of the Republick, that could tend to demonſtrate how ſenſible they were of the Honour done them by this Embaſſy. The Senators appointed to attend were choſe out of the principal Families and chief Men of the State. At Night great Numbers of the moſt conſiderable of the Venetian Nobility of both Sexes came to pay their Compliments to the Ambaſſador and Ambaſſadreſs. The Ambaſſador ſupported his Character with Dignity, Mag-

(Price Four-Pence.)

Magnificence and Politeneſs. His Palace was finely illuminated, Concerts of Muſick in ſeveral Rooms, and the Company entertained with Chocolate, Iced Waters, &c. &c. for two Days, during which Time the Palace was crouded with Masks. His Liveries and Equipages were numerous and ſplendid.

The Earl of Holderneſs's Speech to the College, at his publick Audience the 21ſt of February, 1744-5.

Moſt Serene Prince,

Moſt Illuſtrious and Excellent Lords,

I Have His Majeſty's expreſs Commands to give your Serenity and Excellencies, in this publick Manner, the ſtrongeſt Aſſurances of his Friendſhip, and that He will, upon all Occaſions, be ready to demonſtrate the great Regard and Conſideration He has for this Republick, and to do whatever may tend to the maintaining and improving a ſtrict Harmony between Himſelf and this State, and a good Correſpondence between the reſpective Subjects of both Nations.

I am perſuaded, your Serenity and Excellencies will ſet the true Value upon the Friendſhip of a great King, ruling over the Hearts of a flouriſhing free People; a faithful Defender of his diſtreſſed Allies, a zealous Supporter of the Balance and Liberties of Europe.

The Wiſdom, Conduct, and great Actions of this State, raiſe in me the higheſt Veneration and Reſpect towards it; and ſure I am, that whenever this Republick ſhall think proper to exert itſelf, none of the great Qualities of her renowned Anceſtors are wanting to equal or even out-do the greateſt of her Predeceſſors, her Friendſhip will always be courted, her Diſpleaſure will always be feared.

For my own Particular, I ſhall ever look upon it as the greateſt Mark of my Royal Maſter's Goodneſs towards me, that he has entruſted me with this Declaration of his Sentiments, and I ſhall conſtantly make it my Study to promote the beſt Underſtanding, and to contribute all that in me lies to the Proſperity and Welfare of this powerful State.

Naples, March 9. The Clergy in this Kingdom, and eſpecially the Orders of Fryars, are extremely uneaſy at the Opinion which prevails in this City, that the King, in the preſent Situation of Affairs, propoſes to make uſe of the Plate and rich Furniture of the Churches and Convents to ſupport the great Expences which the Maintenance of his Troops abroad occaſions to him at preſent. The King, by Advice of the Spaniſh and French Courts, is not to ſtir this Summer from Naples. M. de la Vieu Ville is charged, it is ſaid, with the Command of the Neapolitan Troops at the opening of the Campaign. The Train of 40 large Cannon and 20 Mortars, which the King furniſhes to the Spaniſh Army, is getting ready with great Diligence, and ſeveral Tranſports have already been hired for tranſporting it to Ancona.

Rome, March 13. The lateſt Advices from Spoleti bring the melancholy Accounts, that that City had been terrified for many Hours with dreadful Shocks of an Earthquake, by which many Steeples were thrown down, and the Buildings and Houſes in general had received great Damage. On the 7th the Cardinals Oddi and Lanti had their firſt private Audience of the Pope, when they both were preſented with the Cardinal's Cap; and on the 10th they received, with the uſual publick Formality, the Hat.

Florence, March 16. M. de Gages has moved his Head Quarters from Viterbo to Foligno, between which Place and Perugia all his Troops are ſituated at preſent. The Artillery, conſiſting of 18 large Pieces of Cannon, and 23 ſmall, are on the Road thither. The Neapolitan Troops are likewiſe in March to join the Spaniards, which it was ſuppoſed they would do by the 20th Inſtant; and that then the whole Army would move. It is ſtill publickly ſaid in the Spaniſh Camp, that they are to march directly towards Prince Lobcowitz's Army. The Spaniſh Troops deſert very conſiderably, but there are ſo many People employed all over the Papal State to ſeize them, that it is with great Difficulty any eſcape. They publickly raiſe Recruits in Rome, and in the Neighbourhood. The Pope having made a ſecond Diminution of his Troops, moſt of them, as the others were ſome Months ago, have been engaged in the Spaniſh Service, and no Body doubts but that this has been done by the Connivance of the Pope's Miniſters. Prince Lobcowitz is aſſembling his Troops together, in order to have them ready at hand on any Occaſions. Recruits from Germany and Lombardy daily reinforce his Army: But General Bathiani is ſaid to be on his Journey to Italy, to ſucceed him in the Command, and that the Prince is to repair to his Government of Milan. Regimentals and Arms are ſending from this City to the different Towns and Villages of Tuſcany, to cloath and put in Order the Militia; and the neceſſary Proviſions and Forage are ſending to St. Piero a Sieve in the Mugello, for the Subſiſtance of the Tuſcan Troops there. In Conſequence of theſe Diſpoſitions, and the extraordinary Expence attending the ſame, on the 11th Inſtant an Impoſition of 6 per Cent. was fixed by the Regency on the Revenues of the Tuſcan Subjects. On the 25th paſt M. de Braitwitz returned hither from Leghorn, after he had reviewed the Fortifications, and ordered that Place to be provided with all Neceſſaries. This General having asked his Diſ-miſſion from the Great Duke, is preparing to leave this City, in order to take the Benefit of the Baths.

Stockholm, March 12, O. S. On Saturday Evening laſt died here, in a very advanced Age, Counteſs Gyllenborg, the Lady of Senator Count Gyllenborg, the Preſident of the Chancery. Yeſterday Count Finckenſtein, the Pruſſian Miniſter, had a private Audience of his Swediſh Majeſty; in which he delivered a Letter from the preſent Elector of Bavaria, notifying the Death of the Emperor his Father.

Berlin, March 30, N. S. His Pruſſian Majeſty is arrived at Neiſs. Mollendorffs Regiment of Dragoons has received Orders to quit Brandenbourg, and to march immediately into Sileſia. They are embarking Cannon-Balls from 12 to 24 Pounders here, and it is ſaid, that between 15 and 1600 Boats are prepared for tranſporting Proviſions to the Army in Sileſia. A few Days ſince 150 Carriages laden with Sabres, Muskets and Caps, ſet out for the Army, but the Horſes which are to draw the Cannon and Mortars are not yet arrived. The reigning Prince of Deſſau is expected here this Day or To-morrow, it is ſaid, in his Way to Deſſau, to attend the Funeral of the late Princeſs his Wife.

Mayence, April 1, N. S. The French have begun to raiſe a Bridge of Boats at Biberich, a little below this City, in the ſame Place where the Allied Army had theirs in 1743. The French Army has been in Motion theſe two Days, and Marſhal de Maillebois has ordered a Camp to be traced out between Butſhbach and Arnſpurg, about four Leagues on this Side Wetzlar; where General Sommerfeld is poſted with Part of the Hanoverian Troops, which are extended from thence along the Banks of the Lahne to Wilmar. The Dutch under General Smiſſaert are cantoned from thence to Dietz, and the Auſtrians from thence towards the Mouth of that River, which diſcharges itſelf into the Rhine near Coblentz. The Duke of Aremberg's Head Quarters are at Hadamar, but it is uncertain how long the Allied Army will remain in that Poſition. The French are in Poſſeſſion of Konigſtein, and the Elector's Garriſon is already returned into this Town.

Hague, April 6. By Advice from the Confederate Army, the Duke of Aremberg had order'd the Right and Left Wings of his Cantonment upon the Lahne, to approach nearer the Center; againſt which it was apprehended that M. Maillebois was forming ſome Deſign.

In the next Gazette will be inſerted the Tranſlations of the Anſwer of the Doge and of the Senate, to the Earl of Holderneſs, his Britannick Majeſty's Ambaſſador.
